Athletic Field Lights Will be Ready by Oct. 5

Contract is Signed by Lions Club for Installation

Contracts have been signed by the Antioch Lions club for installation of a lighting system at Antioch Township High school's athletic field, and the club has been assured that the lights will be ready for use for the first home conference game of the season, with Bensenville on Oct. 5.

The lights will be on a par with those at the Waukegan field, and will be suitable for use for football, baseball, hockey, skating and other outdoor evening athletic events and recreations.

Praise Response

While the Lions are underwriting the costs of the project, they have requested the aid of other organizations and of individuals interested in contributing to the project.

The response to date has been most heartening, it is announced by Harry J. Krueger, president of the club, and F. J. ("Bud") Arnold, chairman of the lights fund committee.

However, they state, there is still a balance to be met, and further aid will be greatly appreciated.

Good Corn Crop is Expected in Illinois

The possibility of untimely frosts is the only major hazard now confronting a highly promising Illinois corn crop, according to state and federal departments of agriculture. As of Sept. 1, the prospects are for a yield of 47.0 bushels per acre. Warm weather and near normal average August rainfall brought about an increase of four bushels per acre from the Aug. 1 outlook.

In spite of August's forcing heat, the crop is generally late, and a killing frost before the usual date would cut the quality and yield materially. The crop in the southern third of the state, and in a strip one or two counties wide along the Mississippi river is regarded as farthest from maturity and in most danger from frost. Not much insect damage has been noted except from the corn borer, which has been more prevalent than last year.

Present prospects indicate a crop of 74.8 million bushels soybeans, which would break all Illinois records, and top last year's bumper yield by almost three and a half million bushels. A yield of 21.0 bushels per acre is indicated. Although soybeans are late, the vines are well-podded and making good progress, so that the crop is regarded as standing less risk from frost than corn.

The condition of Illinois pastures is reported as the third best in twenty years. Milk and egg production is being kept at high levels.

Sequoia V.F.W. Post Headed by Dr. Zimmerman

Lake Region Veterans of Foreign Wars Plan Installation

Sequoia post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars elected Dr. L. J. Zimmerman as its first commander at a meeting held by 40 members from the various communities of the lake region, Tuesday evening in the village hall.

Robert Willett is senior vice-commander; Joseph Cosgrove, junior vice-commander; James F. Horan, quartermaster; Dr. Earl J. Hays, chaplain; Thomas Quilty, Sr., guard and custodian; Clark L. Kohler, adjutant.

Warren Edwards, George Schultz and Marvin Laycock are trustees.

The newly instituted post, which includes the lake area communities of Lake and Kenosha counties, will hold a public installation and initiation in Antioch Township High school, at a date to be announced in the near future.

District Commr. to Assist

Harold H. Kolbe, Waukegan, Fifth district commander, is to act as the installing officer, and a crack installation team from Kenosha will take part in the ceremonies of the evening.

Special invitations are being issued to other patriotic organizations to be represented at this time.

The newly instituted V. F. W. post will hold its meetings on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

Twenty guests from Waukegan and Bensenville were present Tuesday evening, in addition to the Sequoia post membership.

When Sidney Dibble, Lake Villa, goes hunting these days, he takes a car. A red fox, believed to be about a year old, was struck and killed by Dibble's automobile Friday evening. Eight others were caught in traps in the vicinity recently.

A new door has been installed in the front of the Wilton Electric shop.

Not on the program was the momentary flurry of amusement when three-year-old Bonnie Lee Hills, locating Mrs. Sine Laursen in the gathering at the Antioch Legion-Auxiliary installation the other evening, exclaimed triumphantly, "There's Great-Grandmamma!"

The Legion members received considerable praise for their progress in the redecoration and remodeling of their new "home," the former Danish hall.

The upper part of the walls and the ceiling are a light cream or pale buff, with the lower walls a darker, harmonizing shade.

Walls are being put in downstairs to shut off the furnace room and coal room, and improvements are being planned in connection with the facilities for serving food and other refreshments.

Sights along the streets these days—that bright and shining look of the school children starting off on a new year; a queue of eager youngsters lining up at Reeves drug store for ice cream cones, compliments of the management—a custom of many years' standing; long lines of parked cars up and down the curbs belying the idea of "post-Labor Day quiet."

Return of increasing numbers of Antioch men from duty in the armed services is already supplying the Antioch Hot Stove league with a fair amount of material for conversation for the cooler months.

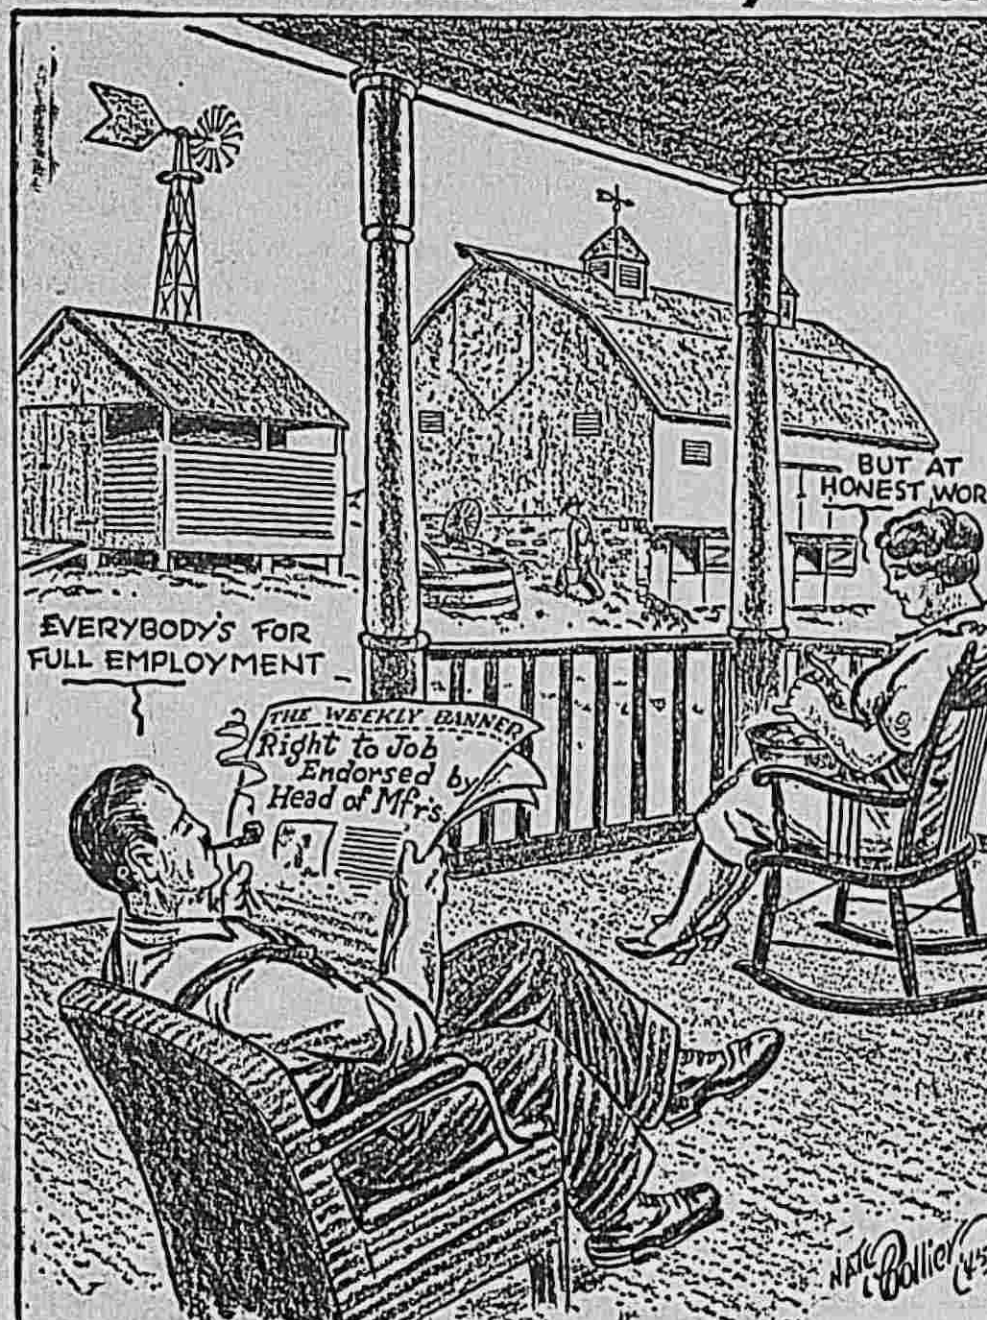

CHARLES HAWKINS, USMC, PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Charles Hawkins, U. S. Marine corps, care of San Francisco Fleet post office, has been promoted to captain.

Mrs. Eliza Cubbon, Ill Several Years, Dies at Age of 82

Came to This Country as Child, Aboard Sailing Vessel

Mrs. Eliza Barnstable Cubbon, who came to this country from England at the age of six, aboard a sailing vessel that took six weeks to make the trip, passed away in Victory Memorial hospital Wednesday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, aged 82.

Funeral services are to be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the St. Francis chapel, with the Rev. Warren C. Henslee officiating. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Cubbon had been in poor health for several years.

She was born in Middlesex, England, April 2, 1863, and was the daughter of Thomas and Anne Barnstable. For the past 60 years she had made her home in Antioch.

In December, 1885, she was united in marriage at Wilmet, Wis., with Robert J. Cubbon.

She is survived by two sons, Oliver R. Cubbon of Waukegan and Herman Cubbon of Antioch; one sister, Mrs. W. R. Williams of Antioch; and three brothers, James Barnstable of Chetek, Wis., and William and Albert Barnstable of Antioch.

Three sisters and a brother preceded her in death.

Street Dance to Climax War Fund Campaign

As a gala finish to Antioch's War Fund campaign the local fire department, which is acting as the committee, is planning a street dance the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 10.

Music will be furnished by Tronson's sound truck, and an area will be roped off for the dancing.

Canvassing committees are already being organized by the firemen in readiness for the opening of the campaign Oct. 1. In addition, residents of various parts of the township will be asked to act as co-chairmen for their neighborhoods.

Although the quota has been lowered (it was $2,000 last year and is $1,500 this year), it is pointed out that it will be many months before some of the troops overseas can be brought home, and that thousands will have to remain in the armies of occupation, so there will still be a need for the work carried on through the War fund.

The Antioch Rescue squad was called Tuesday to furnish transportation for a pupil at Miss West's school, who was taken to Victory Memorial hospital for treatment. A call was also received this morning for a case of sudden illness, but the patient was found to be recovering when the emergency squad arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Ray and family left this week for a ten day vacation trip, they expect to visit northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas.

S/Sgt. Eugene E. Doyle, who has been serving with the army as a radio man, was granted a discharge from the army on August 23. He served for four years, five months and nineteen days, in Panama, Luxembourg, France and Germany.

Is the Veterans' Educational Program Proving to be a "Dud?"

We note where a number of persons interested in the provisions for helping veterans to further their education are said to have expressed disappointment that so few of them have, so far, availed themselves of opportunities to do so.

We believe that many of those "viewers with alarm" have failed to take into consideration a good many facts concerning veterans, human nature—and circumstances.

In the first place, many veterans went into the service from businesses, jobs and professions in which they were already well established and to which they planned to return. Many of them have already received what, in their judgment, is adequate education or training for the work they do in civilian life. Others have already received additional training in the armed services, and are more anxious to get to work than to go to school.

Some of them—perhaps more of them than is generally realized—are older men with dependants, who feel that an immediate job, and not school, is the urgent necessity in their particular cases.

Some of them are averse to schooling and do not want or desire more than they have had.

And finally, there were many men who felt that while the war was in progress, they should work, rather than go to school.

Some of the men who received discharges were so weary of regimentation, training and education of one sort or another that the mere thought of a school, training or classes was distasteful. And many were just plain weary, and felt that they had earned a rest.

We believe that one of the difficulties in interesting veterans in the educational programs is, that they haven't yet had time for sufficient "let-down" between their service life and their plans for the future.

Perhaps a lengthening of the interval—to even a couple of years—during which the ex-service man may make up his mind whether or not to go on with his schooling might be one answer.

Adult classes in elementary and high school subjects might perhaps be another. Ex-servicemen who have had the foundation for college, technical school or schools specializing in various trades and professions, and who are interested in furthering themselves along specialized lines will no doubt be quick to avail themselves of the opportunity to do so.

But what of the youthful marine who didn't finish high school but made a distinguished record in the Pacific warfare? Will he be content to go back to high school among students two, three or four years younger than himself?

What of those men (and there were some!) who had not received even a full elementary school education? Will they be applying for a government loan so they can go back to grade school? Well, we rather doubt it, even though they might want the training.

It seems to us, where feasible, there might be some special classes arranged to suit the needs of ex-service personnel desirous of receiving education. These could be taught by regular teachers or, where the size of the classes might justify assigning special teachers, by teachers who had done such work for the armed forces.

In some cases, special classes for ex-servicemen could be perhaps worked into the regular night school program of a community. Or, it may be that many communities already have evening school programs that would meet the needs of ex-servicemen whose interests or needs would not be met best by the existing program.

That program, as we see it, is pretty good so far as it goes. But it is our opinion that in trying to skim "the cream of the crop," little thought has been given to the general educational needs of servicemen whose lives were interrupted by the war.

We also believe that "there'll be some changes made," in a practical way, in the educational programs for ex-servicemen when more of the men in armed services—some of whom were educators in civilian life—have come home.

In the meantime, we would not be too disappointed in the results of the educational program so far, or in the response that has been made to it.

We believe that the biggest response, and the greatest results, were necessarily delayed by the continuance of the war, and that the acid test is yet to come.

Delegates Laughed at American Food Habits—Then Imitated Them

Many foreign delegates to the United Nations Conference in San Francisco learned new food habits from the American representatives, says a news release from the National Dairy Council. Drinking milk was a joke to a large number of them before the Conference. It later became a habit with a great many of them.

Two fully equipped American milk bars and a cafeteria well supplied with milk were installed in the San Francisco Opera House which was the Conference headquarters, states the National Dairy Council. At first many of the foreign delegates even laughed at the sight of full-grown Americans drinking milk. Before long, many of them, particularly the British, began imitating the American habits.

Most of them drank milk wholeheartedly, marveling that one could get all he wanted of the precious fluid which is mostly reserved for infants at home. By special dispensation extra milk and cream were made available so that the delegates might enjoy American ice cream also.

Soil And Water are Resources

It is interesting to note that the soil conservation program already under way in Lake county, and in the nation at large, deals also with water conservation.

More and more, the people of this country are beginning to feel that water is one of its great "natural resources," and that it should be conserved rather than wasted.

Marshes which were drained in earlier decades, swampland, and unproductive land not suited for conventional farming are being turned back into wildlife, game and fish refuges, to timber tracts and to grazing.

In some areas, the "ground water" level has sunk during the past 50 or 75 years, to the point where it has endangered water supplies on farms or in municipalities. The natural reservoirs, such as woodland, marsh or swamp have been cut over. The water which they once absorbed and held for long periods drains off suddenly, with resulting floods and soil erosion.

Even in the lakes area around Antioch, the workings of this process have been discernable in the past.

"Marginal lands" which were listed on old maps as swamp area or as land actually under water have, in some instances, become arable farm land. Sloughs have filled in until they became meadows.

The lakes area around Antioch early awakened to the importance of conserving its natural water resources and many farm owners and other landholders in this area have for years been active in following approved soil and water conservation practices.

The state conservation department has given considerable attention to the preserving of the areas waterways and their wildlife.

Many community organizations and resort owners have also given their backing to conservation measures.

The Antioch area has been doubly blessed with rich agricultural resources and with resort and recreational facilities such as could be duplicated in few places.

The soil and water conservation program now in progress will probably be given some real study and some practical application here, where resources of the soil and water affect the livelihood of many persons.

Such programs are not a new thing here, having been proved and approved over many years, and Antioch will no doubt be a leader in post-war conservation work.

Speed May Mean Danger

Lifting of the 35-miles-an-hour speed limit outside of municipalities may tend toward an increase in accidents, according to Charles M. Hayes, President of the Chicago Motor club, who says that with the average age of cars on the road now eight years there is greater danger in high speeds than at any other time in the history of the automobile.

Chicago and Northern Illinois
Transportation Facilities—
Unsurpassed in all the World

Like spokes of a wheel . . . rail, air, truck and shipping lanes fan out from Chicago and Northern Illinois to all parts of America. To the manufacturer located in this area, these facilities mean quick receipt of raw materials . . . speedy delivery of finished products, to markets all over the world. There is a wide choice of available plant sites with ready access to all transportation.

By rail—22 trunk line and 17 belt and terminal railroads serve Chicago and Northern Illinois. 7,726 miles of railroad track converge in the Chicago industrial area alone. This is greater than the main line mileage in 39 of the 48 states.

By air—For any operation where the element of speed in transit is essential, Chicago and Northern Illinois is the ideal place in which to locate postwar plants. Nine principal airlines connect this territory with every major city on the North American continent. Geographical features which have made this area the crossroads of commerce, are now making it a great international airport.

By truck—Over 600 truck and bus lines offering 24-hour-a-day service speed parts, products and people from Chicago and Northern Illinois to 24,000 United States communities. More than 600 miles of new superhighways, now projected, will help speed delivery to every corner of the nation.

By water—10,000 miles of inland waterways serve Chicago and Northern Illinois. Trans-Atlantic vessels can come direct to Lake Michigan ports via the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. The Illinois deep waterway provides a direct link with the Gulf of Mexico. In 1940, a record 43,500,000 tons of lake and Illinois waterway traffic totaled more than the traffic passing through the Panama Canal.

To industry and business seeking locations, transportation is only one of the many advantages offered by the Chicago and Northern Illinois territory. As an aid to business, agriculture and industry, we have established a department to assemble and distribute factual data concerning this area. You are invited to make use of the services of this department. Communicate with the Territorial Information Department, Marquette Bldg., 140 S. Dearborn St., Chicago 3, Ill.—phone RANDolph 1617, or our local office.

Industries locating in this area have these outstanding advantages

Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport • Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. Population • Great Financial Center • The "Great Central Market" • Food Producing and Processing Center • Leader in Iron and Steel Manufacturing • Good Labor Relations Record • 2,500,000 Kilowatts of Power • Tremendous Coal Reserves • Abundant Gas and Oil • Good Government • Good Living

Dietary Habits are Aid to Long Life

Many man-years of life are being saved by better eating, according to the National Dairy council. The greatest spans of life are found in those areas where standards of living are high and where dietary habits are most nearly adequate.

The length of life of the average male citizen of the United States is now more than fifteen years greater than at the beginning of this century. Comparable increases have been noted in certain other countries but in some areas the life span has remained practically stationary.

Better housing, improved sanitary conditions and higher incomes have undoubtedly contributed to longer life. The study of food consumption in different countries, however, furnishes convincing evidence that the diet plays an important part in determining life expectancy.

On the basis of prewar figures, New Zealand leads with a life expectancy of 76 years, followed closely by over sixty-three years and Sweden, U. S. A., England and Germany follow in order with approximately sixty-two years or more. These same countries are among highest consumers of dairy products in the world, with each of them consuming annually the equivalent of more than three hundred fifty quarts of milk per capita when all dairy products are taken into account.

In Italy the average prewar diet includes only the equivalent of one hundred seven quarts of milk a year, and the life span was only about fifty-four years. In India where the average diet includes practically no dairy foods or protective foods of any kind, the average life span is approximately twenty-seven years.

In Memoriam

Cpl. Allen D. Hanke. In loving memory of our dear son and brother killed in Germany one year ago, Sept. 21.

Somewhere in Belgium in a soldier's grave,
Lies our dear Allen—among the brave,
He never shunned his country's call,
But gladly gave his life, his all,
He little thought when leaving home,
He would return no more.
That he in death so soon would sleep
Upon a foreign shore.
We do not know what pain he bore,
We did not see him die.
We only know he passed away,
And could not say goodbye.

Loving Mother, brother and sisters.

Library News

(By Marian Rigby, Librarian)

"Lake Erie," the last of the series of books describing the Great Lakes, was presented to the Library as a memorial to the late Michael Golden. Harlan Hatcher describes Lake Erie's shallow water, fogs, and sudden storms which are a menace to navigation even in this day of weather forecasts and steel ships. Lake Erie's history includes Hull's disgraceful surrender at Detroit, the daring battles of Perry, the Tory opposition of refugees in Canada, and the building of the Erie canal. "Lake Erie" is a worthy member of this valuable series of Americana.

In "Skip to My Lou," William Martin Camp tells the story of the migration of the Hoxie family to the shipyards of California. The wanderlust of Vigo Hoxie is not appeased even when he makes more money in a week than he usually made in a year. Lou Hoxie, longing for her Ozark home, is the mainstay of the family of four children when Vigo is lured away by distant greener pastures.

"The White Tower" is a novel of action and also a novel of ideas. In writing the heroic story of five men and a woman against a mountain, James Ramsey Ullman explores the depths and heights of human kind, and carries the reader with him in this superb account of an epic adventure.

Gary, Indiana, is the scene of "Hunky Johnny," by Edward Nichols. Unlike most of its Slovak population, Hunky Johnny turns to Chicago and its University. Education emphasizes the conflict between his American citizenry and his foreign origin. From this conflict comes a warm and human story of love, frustration and the raw ache of the "Hunky."

Canning Without Sugar Helps Save Fruit

Through canning without sugar for overseas relief American women and girls are saving many thousands of bushels of fruit that would otherwise go to waste, it has been revealed.

Dan A. West, Executive Director of the Community Canning Program for War Relief, declared that through the nation-wide campaign to help build a food pool for Europe's hungry housewives are learning that unsugared canned fruit is both tasty and nutritious.

He explained that in some communities where the program was launched, women who sincerely wanted to can locally abundant fruit and to share it with the mal-nourished people abroad protested at first that sugar rationing held them back. They told local leaders organizing Community Canning for War Relief committees, "We can't get enough enough sugar to can for our own family requirements."

These individuals, Mr. West added, seemed to believe that sugar was necessary for safe canning. He said "They were delighted to learn that fruit packed in a can filled with juice of the fruit itself or water needs no sugar whatever to conserve it, but may easily be processed and sealed. Sugar may be added at the time of serving."

Women and girls, he related, began somewhat timidly to try sugarless canning, then sampled the product and found it good. Realizing that sugar merely makes the fruit sweeter and helps to retain its color, they agreed that to forego the added sweetness was a minor sacrifice, and that it was a shameful waste to allow fruit to rot for the lack of canning sugar.

As a result, there will be many millions of cans of unsugared fruit donated for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to ship overseas. Since this canned food will be a real treat to Europe's boys and girls and men and women who haven't had enough to eat since the beginning of the war.

"Blocking" Garment

To "block" a new or newly washed hand knit garment, here is an easy method: Sprinkle two heavy bath towels slightly and spread the garment between them, pulling to desired measurements and pinning to shape. (Before washing, it is handy to lay garment on paper or cloth and draw outline to use in re-shaping). Cover with a board or other firm, flat surface. Weight this down and leave until the garment is dry. A light steam pressing without mashing also gives knits a finished look.

A few yards in the color you need can probably be purchased from a rug shop or from the manufacturer of your rug. If you write the manufacturer, send information as to pattern number, rug quality and color, which is stamped on the back of the rug.
